Introduction

The Queensland Heritage Register is a listing of places of cultural heritage significance to the people of Queensland. In some instances certain places may no longer fulfil the criteria for state-level heritage significance. Situations in which a place, or part of a place, no longer satisfies the criteria for entry in the register include:

- part of the place has been destroyed by fire or natural disaster
- the removal or demolition of significant elements of the place has been approved and carried out
- further information has become available that proves the place is not of state-level heritage significance.

This application guide explains how to apply to have a State Heritage Place, or part of a place, removed from the Queensland Heritage Register.

Who can apply?

Any person or other entity including an individual, a community group, a local authority, or a government department may apply to the Department of Environment and Heritage Protection (EHP) for a State Heritage Place, or part of a State Heritage Place, to be assessed for removal from the Queensland Heritage Register.

You do not need to be the owner of the place to apply to have it removed from the Queensland Heritage Register. Your personal details will not be provided to the owner unless you indicate on the application form that you do not object to these details being released. Please note that applications, and other documents related to the process of EHP assessing a place, are made available for public viewing. If an applicant consents to the release of their personal details, their name and any affiliation will appear on the public copy of the application, but not their contact details.

Before you make an application

Obtain a certified copy of the entry of the place in the Queensland Heritage Register. This will provide you with the statement of significance based on the cultural heritage criteria from the Queensland Heritage Act 1992 that apply to that place, a summary history and description of the place on which the statement of significance is based, and a heritage boundary map. It is particularly important to understand the extent of the heritage boundary if you are applying for only part of the place to be removed from the register. You will need the other information if you are to mount an argument that the place is no longer of state heritage significance.

A certified copy of entry can be obtained by submitting Application Form: Heritage - Request for a certified copy of entry. A small fee applies.

The application form

The Application form: Removal of a place from the Queensland Heritage Register must be completed and include as much supporting information as possible. This form is available at www.qld.gov.au/environment/land/heritage/

An application that does not satisfy the requirements of the Queensland Heritage Act 1992 cannot be accepted and will be returned to the applicant as non-complying. If you are concerned about meeting these requirements, EHP will review a draft application and provide feedback. Draft applications can be sent to heritage@ehp.qld.gov.au.

Ensure that you have completed mandatory sections of the application form and provided attachments where required.

What information is required in the application?

The application must include the following:

Applicant’s details

You must include your name, postal address and business hours contact telephone number. Anonymous applications cannot be accepted.

Applicants must indicate on the application form if they give permission for their personal details to be released.

Place details

Name of place

Use the name as it appears in the entry in the register. Alternative names or abbreviations may cause confusion.

Address

Use the address or locality information provided in the entry in the register.

Real property description

Supply the real property description provided in the entry in the register.

Local government area

This is identified in the entry in the register.

Map showing the extent of the area to be removed from the Queensland Heritage Register

Using the heritage boundary map supplied with the certified copy of entry in the register, or some other cadastral map on which the existing heritage boundary is identified, shade the area to which your application applies.

If you are applying for removal of the whole place from the register, shade the entire area encompassed within the heritage boundary.

If you are applying for removal of part of the place from the register, shade only the area you wish to see excised from the heritage boundary. If the area to be removed does not correspond to a lot on plan, be sure to include on the map accurate dimensions or GPS points.

The amended boundary does not have to follow lot on plan (cadastral) boundaries, but a simple and uncomplicated boundary is best.
Boundary description
A written boundary description can help to clarify an amended boundary, especially if you need to indicate that the boundary extends to the far side of a lagoon or creek; is taken as a circumference from the trunk of a tree; includes part of a road reserve where a tree or street awning overhangs the footpath; or you wish to identify a distance from a structure or group of structures.

Brief written description of the place, or of that part of the place to be removed
Your argument for removal needs to be supported by a description which makes it clear why the place is no longer of state cultural heritage significance. You should consider all the significant elements identified in the entry in the Register. If the place has suffered damage, describe the site as it is now. If you are applying for the removal of part of the place, limit your description to that part only.

Current photographs of the place
It is essential that you provide current photographs of the place in support of your argument for removal from the register. These should be digital images, with the date they were taken recorded on them. Mark on a site plan or sketch plan the direction from which each photograph was taken. The photos should be provided electronically.

Historical research
Your argument that the place is not of state heritage significance needs to be supported by thorough research and documentary evidence.

Sources of useful historical information include:
- land title documents
- historical photographs, maps and plans
- contemporary newspapers, magazines and journals
- manuscript material such as diary extracts or company records
- Queensland State Archives and the National Archives of Australia
- local government archives and rate books
- published histories of the place and area.

The John Oxley Library within the State Library of Queensland located in Brisbane is the principal repository of historical information about Queensland. Most local libraries also hold historical collections relevant to their local area, and many of the universities in the major regional centres hold historical collections relating to the region.

There are also many historical research tools and resources available via the internet. Some of the more popular sites are listed below:
- Picture Queensland: www.slq.qld.gov.au/resources/picture-queensland (Note that not all photographs held by the John Oxley Library have been digitised and made available through Picture Queensland)
- Trove (National Library of Australia): trove.nla.gov.au/. This web resource gives researchers access to Picture Australia and Australian newspapers online, as well as the holdings of the NLA
- Queensland State Archives: www.archives.qld.gov.au

Writing a summary history of a place
The summary history should be kept brief, and supported by your research:

Do:
- arrange the information in chronological order.

Avoid:
- unsubstantiated assertions—such as a place is ‘not very old’
Discussion of significance

In discussing the significance you need to explain why the place no longer satisfies the criteria relied on in the entry in the Queensland Heritage Register, drawing from the historical summary and written description you have provided.

To be entered in the register, the place would have been assessed against the criteria set out in the Queensland Heritage Act which guides determinations about state heritage significance:

a) The place is important in demonstrating the evolution or pattern of Queensland’s history.

b) The place demonstrates rare, uncommon or endangered aspects of Queensland’s cultural heritage.

c) The place has potential to yield information that will contribute to an understanding of Queensland’s history.

d) The place is important in demonstrating the principal characteristics of a particular class of cultural places.

e) The place is important because of its aesthetic significance.

f) The place is important in showing a high degree of creative or technical achievement at a particular period.

g) The place has a strong or special association with a particular community or cultural group for social, cultural or spiritual reasons.

h) The place has a special association with the life or work of a particular person, group or organisation of importance in Queensland’s history.

To help you to determine whether a place is of state significance, refer to Guideline: Assessing cultural heritage significance - Using the cultural heritage criteria available at www.qld.gov.au/environment/land/heritage/.
